Prepare yourself for a spine-tingling adventure as we navigate the haunted side of Illinois along the legendary Route 66. In "Illinois Haunted Route 66: Haunted America," you'll embark on a journey into the realm of the supernatural, uncovering chilling tales and exploring haunted sites that will send shivers down your spine.

Haunted Sites Along Route 66

From the infamous Lizzie Borden House in Fall River, Massachusetts to the eerie Stanley Hotel in Estes Park, Colorado, Route 66 has its fair share of haunted history. As you travel along the Mother Road in Illinois, prepare to encounter ghostly apparitions, unexplained phenomena, and eerie legends that linger in the shadows.

Some of the most well-known haunted sites along Illinois Route 66 include:

- The Cherry Bowl Drive-In in Pontiac, where ghostly apparitions have been spotted in the projection booth and the parking lot.
- The old Pontiac Correctional Center, where the spirits of former inmates are said to wander the halls.
- The Old Joliet Prison, a former state penitentiary that has been converted into a museum and is said to be haunted by the ghosts of executed inmates.
- The Dana-Thomas House in Springfield, designed by Frank Lloyd Wright, where visitors have reported seeing the ghost of a child who died in the house.
- The Belvidere Mansion in Belvidere, a historic mansion rumored to be haunted by the ghost of a young woman who died in a tragic accident.

Legends of the Supernatural

Beyond the specific haunted sites, Route 66 in Illinois is also steeped in supernatural legends and lore. One of the most famous tales is the Legend of the Phantom Hitchhiker, a ghostly woman who is said to hitchhike along the highway, only to vanish into thin air.

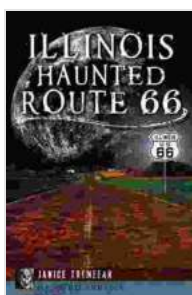

Another chilling legend is the story of the Red Eyed Demon, a malevolent entity that is said to inhabit the abandoned buildings and bridges along Route 66. According to legend, the Red Eyed Demon preys on unsuspecting travelers, causing them to crash their cars or disappear without a trace.
